RE: Stay Safe at NMSU website

One of the most important responsibilities we have here at New Mexico State University is ensuring that our students are safe. NMSU is committed to providing a place of work and learning that is free of discrimination and harassment.

This responsibility has been underscored by recent changes to Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972, and the recently enacted Campus SaVE Act.

As part of this process, we have developed a new website – staysafe.nmsu.edu – which outlines steps that can be taken to stay safe, how to recognize sexual assault and other sexual misconduct, and resources to turn to should a person become a victim of such a crime.

We invite you to visit the website, which can be reached from the university's home page, www.nmsu.edu. Simply click on the "Student Life" tab near the top of the page and select the "Stay Safe at NMSU" button on the left side of the page.

For more information on Title IX or the Campus SaVE Act, please contact the university's Title IX Coordinator Gerard Nevarez or Title IX Deputy Coordinator Agustin Diaz at the NMSU Office of Institutional Equity, O'Loughlin House, 1130 University Ave., Las Cruces, 575-646-3635, or email equity@nmsu.edu.
